The route for today follows a beautiful road and our first stop amongst others is at the famous sea temple Tanah Lot, usually visited during sunset but virtually deserted and equally charming in the morning. Further visits include the refined temple Pura Taman Ayun, the small but interesting butterfly-park Wanasari and the stunning rice-terraces of Jatiluwih, passing lakes Brinan (with beautifully situated temple Pura Ulun Brinan), Tamblingan and Buyan on the way, we arrive in Munduk late in the afternoon. Munduk is a typical Balinese village, with its village-temple, busy morning-market, Balinese houses and of course it's barking dogs late at night. The villagers make their living growing cloves and rice so there are rice-terraces and clove-plantations as far as the eye can see. This area is ideally suited for long and short hikes.
